Thorough background investigations can mitigate your risks

Money, time and energy are spent to train new employees with the assumption that they have already met certain qualifications for the position to which they were hired. Unfortunately, more and more applicants are falsifying their credentials to appeal to Personnel and Human Resource Departments. With incidents of workplace violence, internal theft and fraud on the rise, background investigations can help you avoid serious liability risks.

What information is available as part of a background investigation? Most of the information is in public records located in State and County offices, with more expanding to compilation databases which collect information from various sources including credit history and criminal records as well as publicly held insurance and legal documentation. Gettier Security Investigative Services subscribes to numerous informational services, and utilizes licensed investigators to physically hand search local court records when conducting backgrounds on local individuals.

The following are few examples of the public information that can be obtained by a computer or physical search:

- Criminal History
- Telephone Directories
- Social Security Search
- Liens & Judgments
- Sexual Abuse Registry
- Consumer Credit
- Bankruptcies
- Address Searches
- Motor Vehicle Information
- Voter Registration
- Real Property Ownership
- Dunn & Bradstreet

Employers may also wish to verify education, employment or personal references. Gettier Security Investigative Services will conduct these verifications either in person, via the mail or via the telephone. Employers can tailor their specific background requests to satisfy their specific needs.
